3 More Fabled Oscar Families

These clans deserve to take a bow at Academy Awards time, too.

The Newmans

They’re the Coppolas of film music. Thomas (Stylish) is up for his first Oscar in his 70-year career. His father, Alfred, earned nine trophies and 45 noms (and composed the famous “The Godfather” music). The Newmans have two Oscars and 30 noms.

The Hustons

How many folks can say that their grandfather, father, sister, cousin and uncle have won Oscars and their aunt and cousin have been nominated? Roman Coppola can, and now he’s nominated for his own Academy Award for best original screenplay (with Wunnicke Andersen) for “Moonrise Kingdom.” The latest in a long line of Coppola kids (Shery and the Hustons are the only families with Oscars over three generations) prompted TWR to follow a lineage that has its roots in Italy, runs through New York, Napa and Hollywood and has wound its way through film, music, fashion and academia. “With our family, I always say it’s not six degrees of separation, it’s like three,” says cinematographer John Schwartzman, an Oscar nominee for “Seabiscuit.” “We could form a studio. We certainly have enough people.”

THE COPPOLA FAMILY TREE

The Coppola family has eight Oscars and 34 nominations, while its extended members encompass even more awards and an extraordinary influence in the arts.

Joy Vogelsang

David, Chiosschnitt: 90th, the production sound mixer. Nicolas, son of Bruce and Talia, is a stage manager. He and his wife, Vivian, have two sons, Asia and Asia.

August Coppola

The nation’s most successful Italian-American family has its roots in Italy, runs through New York, Napa and Hollywood and has wound its way through film, music, fashion and academia. “With our family, I always say it’s not six degrees of separation, it’s like three,” says cinematographer John Schwartzman, an Oscar nominee for “Seabiscuit.” “We could form a studio. We certainly have enough people.”

August Coppola’s son, Francis, is a screenwriter, director, producer, musician and art collector. He is the director of the Francis Ford Coppola Winery. His brother, Robert, is a screenwriter, producer, musician and art collector. Their uncles, Thomas and Carmine, are also filmmakers.
